HENRY BAILEY. One of the families that comprise the good and effective citizenship of Harrison County is that of the late Henry Bailey. Mrs. Nancy T. Bailey is now head of the farm interests of the family, located four miles east of Cynthiana.

The late Henry Bailey was born in Harrison County June 27, 1836, but as a child was taken by his parents, Charles and Katie (Van Hook) Bailey, to Crawfordsville, Indiana, where he secured his education in the public schools. After reaching manhood he returned to Harrison County, and on November 10, 1867, married Nancy Talbert. Mr. Bailey for many years was a successful teacher as well as farmer. He died on July 9, 1894.

Mrs. Bailey was born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, about two miles east of Ruddles Mills, August 24, 1838. Her parents were Daniel and Lydia (Whaley) Talbert. Her father was born in Virginia, February 17, 1782, and her mother in the same state March 10, 1810. Her grandfather was Harry Talbert, a native of England, who ran away from home and boarded a vessel and reached America, settling in Loudoun County, Virginia, where he married and followed farming for half a century, rearing a family of nine children. All these children came to Kentucky and established homes in Bourbon County, where Harry Talbert had entered and purchased land of about 100 acres. The five sons and four daughters of Harry Talbert were Daniel, Reason, George, Harry, Charles, Mary, Nancy, Katherine and Katie. Mary was the wife of Lee Whaley; Nancy married Daniel McShane; Katie later also became the wife of Lee Whaley.

Daniel Talbert, father of Mrs. Bailey, married Ann Whaley, who became the mother of William, Lucinda, Ellen and Mary. The second wife of Daniel Talbert was Lydia Whaley, and to this marriage were born Nancy T., Susan and Katherine.

Nancy Talbert was reared in Bourbon County and acquired an effective education in the district school and the Millersburg Female College. She is the mother of five sons: Harry, Charles, M. Archie, C. Kirtley and Robin T. The family are members of the Indian Creek Baptist Church and all are republicans in politics. Mrs. Bailey owns 160 acres in the homestead and with her sons has capably managed that place for a number of years. She is also a stockholder in the Farmers National Bank. The sons are all active Masons except Robin, who lives in Chicago. Harry Bailey was a past grand master of the Grand Lodge and past high priest of the Grand Chapter of Kentucky. In 1912 he ran for Congress on the republican ticket and was beaten by a very small majority.

GEORGE HALMHUBER is one of the well known citizens and business men of the capital city, being a banker, wholesale grocer and identified with a number of enterprises of more or less public interest.

Mr. Halmhuber was born in Franklin County, on a farm five miles south of Frankfort, September 23, 1879. His father, John J. Halmhuber, had occupied that farm since June of the same year and lived there until his death on October 28, 1910. John J. Halmhuber was born in Stuttgart, Germany, May 10, 1823, and came to the United States in 1846, locating at Frankfort, Kentucky. He was a cabinet maker, one of the old-time finished workmen, who performed by hand most of the work now done by machinery, and was also an exceedingly skilled artist in all branches of woodwork. A desk he made for Governor Leslie, with the seal of the state inlaid in wood, is still preserved in the rooms of the State Historical Society. He made practically all the desks, tables, filing cases and other equipment for the old State Capitol. After following his trade in Frankfort for over thirty years he retired to the farm and lived in the country environment while his children were growing up. He was a democrat, and during the Civil war was commissioned a colonel in the State Guard of Kentucky. He was an active supporter of the Presbyterian Church and was a member of Hiram Lodge No. 4, A. F. and A. M. John J. Halmhuber married Mary Gore, who was born in Franklin County in 1833, and died on the old farm April 14, 1900. She was the mother of seven children, the youngest being George. The oldest, Emma, is the wife of W. V. Crossfield, a grocery merchant at South Frankfort. W. M. Halmhuber was a farmer and died at Frankfort in 1918. Mary is the wife of Joe B. Hubbell, a carpenter and builder at South Frankfort. Ida is the wife of Ben T. Gudgel, a retail grocery merchant at South Frankfort. Louisa is the wife of A. T. Carter, in the wholesale grocery business at Frankfort. John H. is cashier of the First National Bank of Florence, Arizona.

George Halmhuber grew up on a farm, attended rural schools, graduated from the Frankfort High School in 1897, and the following two years lived on the farm and participated in its work. Following that for four and a half years he was in the retail grocery business at Frankfort, and in 1904 became bookkeeper in the Mount Eden Bank at Mount Eden, Kentucky, remaining there a year and four months. With the organization in 1906 of the Citizens Bank of Pekin, Indiana, he was cashier when the bank opened for business in January, 1907, and continued to reside in that Indiana town for two and a half years. He resigned in June, 1909, and returned to Frankfort to become cashier of the Peoples State Bank, organized in that year under a state charter. He has continued at the post of cashier, is also a director, and has done much to build up the institution as one of the stable banks of Franklin County. This bank has a capital of $50,000, surplus and profits of $25,000, and deposits averaging $800,000. The officers and directors are: N. B. Smith, president, who is county judge of Franklin County; J. P. Hulette, vice president, a farmer twelve miles north of Frankfort; Mr. Halmhuber, cashier; and A. A. Hulette, assistant cashier; James Slucher, director, a farmer five miles north of Frankfort; G. R. Lyon, president of the Lyon Lumber Company at Frankfort; Kelley C. Smither, Circuit Court clerk of Franklin County; T. B. McGregor, assistant attorney-general of the state.

Mr. Halmhuber is also treasurer of the Capital Building and Loan Association, of which N. B. Smith is president. He is president of the Capital Grocery Company, one of the leading wholesale institutions of Frankfort. He is also president of the Capital Bottling Works, treasurer of the Allen McLean Oil Company, and is treasurer of the Kentucky Normal and Industrial Institute of Frankfort. During the last twelve years he has built and sold eight dwellings, thus contributing to the housing program of Frankfort and vicinity. His own home is a modern residence at 119 Shelby Street. Mr. Halmhuber is a democrat, is affiliated with Mount Eden Lodge No. 267, A. F. and A. M., Frankfort Lodge No. 530 of the Elks, Pekin Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men at Pekin, Indiana, and a member of the Frankfort Chamber of Commerce.

In 1909, at Salem, Indiana, he married Miss Blanche Wilson, daughter of Theodore and Nina (Menaugh) Wilson. Her parents live at Salem, where her father is cashier of the Citizens Bank.

WARNER ELLMORE SETTLE has been a member of the Kentucky bar for nearly half a century. For more than nineteen years he has been a judge of the Kentucky State Court of Appeals. For ten years he was a Circuit judge. At the conclusion of his present term he will have served twenty-four years on the Appellate
