

BEAR KILLED AT MT. M'GREGOR.

Farmer Hubbell Tracked It From His Beehives and Shot It.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Job Hubbell, a well known farmer in Moreau, Saratoga county, has been troubled by depredations among his beehives and elsewhere on his farm for several days and was greatly puzzled to account for them. Saturday morning he found tracks which convinced him that it was a bear, so he started out with his rifle and dog. The dog followed the trail leading to Mount McGregor until it became too fresh, but Farmer Hubbell continued on the track and soon came up with a fine bear. When within ten yards of the animal he fired once and sent a bullet through the brain of the bear, instantly killing it. The carcass weighed over 200 pounds. This is the first bear seen on Mount McGregor in scores of years, and is supposed to have wandered down from the Adirondacks, where half a dozen or so are killed each year.
